Preface.....	XI
Chapter 1 Introduction.....	1
1. Preamble: the problem of the pivot.....	1
2. Goals and contents of this thesis.....	3
2.1. Objectives	3
2.2. Overview.....	4
3. The theory of grammar	6
2.1. Phrase structure	6
2.2. Movement and features.....	8
 Part A Relative constructions: typology and theory	 11
Chapter 2 A typology of relative constructions	13
1. Introduction.....	13
2. Overview: definitions, examples, and parametric freedom	13
2.1. The definition of ‘relative construction’	14
2.2. Examples of important relative clause types	15
2.3. Parametric freedom.....	17
2.4. Syntactic main types of relatives	20
2.5. Terminological remarks	20
3. On the semantics of relative clauses: Grosu & Landman’s scale.....	23
4. Lehmann’s functional classification of relative constructions.....	29
5. Downing’s universals and general implications	34
6. Special types of relative clauses	40
6.1. Correlatives	40
6.2. Circumnominal relatives	41
6.3. Free relatives	42
6.3.1. Types and properties of free relatives	42
6.3.2. The transition between free relatives of the postnominal type, correlatives, and circumnominal relatives	46
6.3.3. A systematic classification of free relatives.....	50
6.4. Adverbial relatives.....	55
6.5. Non-finite relatives.....	58
6.6. Cleft and pseudo-cleft sentences	61
7. Aspects of the relative construction	62
7.1. Relative pronouns and particles.....	62
7.2. The position of the external determiner	63
7.3. Recursive and linear multiple embedding.....	64
7.4. Pied piping and preposition stranding.....	64

7.5. Extraposition	65
7.6. Multiple relativization	66
8. Conclusion	68
Chapter 3 Towards the syntax of relativization	69
1. Introduction.....	69
2. General discussion	70
2.1. The historical development of the theory on the syntax of relativization...	70
2.2. The D-complement hypothesis.....	74
2.3. The raising analysis of relative clauses	76
2.3.1. Circumnominal relatives	77
2.3.2. The pivot function of the head noun	77
2.3.3. Collocations.....	78
2.3.4. Binding facts	80
2.4. Conclusion	82
3. The standard analysis versus the promotion theory	83
3.1. Outline of the different analyses.....	83
3.1.1. The old standard theory.....	84
3.1.2. The revised standard theory.....	84
3.1.3. The revised raising analysis.....	85
3.1.4. The promotion theory.....	86
3.1.5. The antisymmetric promotion theory	86
3.2. Evaluation: syntactic main types and word order	86
3.2.1. Preliminaries: phrase structure rules and underlying orders	87
3.2.2. The derivation of relative constructions in VO languages.....	91
3.2.3. The derivation of relative constructions in OV languages.....	96
3.2.4. Summary and conclusion	99
3.3. Evaluation: the relation between the antecedent and the gap	105
3.4. Summary.....	109
4. Conclusion	109
Chapter 4 The promotion theory of relative constructions	111
1. Introduction.....	111
2. The promotion theory: previous scholarship	111
2.1. Kayne's (1994) analysis and Borsley's (1997) criticism	111
2.2. Bianchi (1999/2000a)	114
3. Postnominal relatives	116
3.1. Wh-movement.....	116
3.2. Case and agreement	118
3.3. The relation between N and D.....	119
3.4. A detailed derivation of postnominal restrictive relatives	123
3.5. ‘That’-relatives	126
3.6. Word order variation	127
3.7. Conclusion	130
4. Prenominal relatives	131

5.	Circumnominal relatives	135
5.1.	Introduction and properties	136
5.2.	Historical developments concerning the analysis	137
5.3.	The derivation of circumnominal relatives.....	138
5.4.	Additional issues	141
5.4.1.	The indefiniteness effect	141
5.4.2.	Verbs and morphology.....	141
5.4.3.	Nominalization and cross-linguistic generalizations.....	142
5.4.4.	Internal head movement.....	142
5.4.5.	Island effects.....	143
5.4.6	Maximalization and subjacency.....	144
6.	Correlatives	145
6.1.	Introduction and properties	145
6.2.	Historical developments concerning the analysis	146
6.3.	The derivation of correlative constructions	148
7.	The syntax of main types of relatives: summary and conclusion.....	150
Chapter 5 Relative elements		155
1.	Introduction.....	155
2.	Theoretical predictions of types of relative pronouns and particles	155
2.1.	The function of relative pronouns and particles	155
2.2.	From functions to syntax: a revision of Lehmann (1984)	157
3.	The syntax of relative elements.....	162
3.1.	The COMP domain: relative pronouns and complementizers	162
3.2.	Resumptive pronouns	165
3.3.	Relative markers.....	170
3.3.1.	Apparent relative markers: classifiers	170
3.3.2.	Real relative markers?.....	171
4.	A fine-grained typology of relative elements	173
4.1.	A classification of relative elements	173
4.2.	Combinations of relative elements	177
5.	Conclusion	178
Part B Related detailed studies		179
Chapter 6 Apposition		181
1.	Introduction.....	181
2.	Differences between restrictive and appositive relatives.....	181
2.1.	The antecedent	182
2.2.	Relative elements and pied piping.....	188
2.3.	Extraposition and stacking	190
2.4.	Scope, binding and reconstruction.....	191
2.5.	Intonation.....	195
3.	Misconceptions on appositive relatives.....	196

3.1.	False statements that persist in the literature, and properties of English that do not have a universal status	196
3.2.	Other issues	200
4.	The syntax of appositive relatives: different views.....	203
5.	A coordination analysis of apposition	210
5.1.	Apposition, specification and coordination	211
5.2.	Appositive relatives are specifying conjuncts	215
5.2.1.	Appositive relatives behave as appositions	215
5.2.2.	Some cross-linguistic considerations	217
5.3.	Appositive relatives as free relatives in apposition	218
5.3.1.	Outline	219
5.3.2.	Some notes on the syntax of free relatives	220
5.3.3.	Appositive relatives are ‘false’ free relatives	221
5.4.	The behaviour of appositives explained.....	223
5.5.	Matching effects	227
6.	Conclusion	231
Chapter 7 Extrapolation.....		233
1.	Introduction.....	233
2.	Extrapolation of relative clauses.....	233
3.	Extrapolation in a broader perspective	235
4.	Analyses of extrapolation	239
5.	Properties of extrapolation: an evaluation of different types of analyses	241
5.1.	Theoretical evaluation	241
5.2.	Empirical evaluation.....	244
5.2.1.	Extrapolation from any constituent	244
5.2.2.	Extrapolation from embedded positions	246
5.2.3.	Mirror effects	248
5.2.4.	No preposing.....	250
5.2.5.	No left position	250
5.2.6.	The Right Roof Constraint.....	251
5.2.7.	No stranding in the middlefield.....	254
5.2.8.	Kaan’s generalization	256
5.2.9.	Islandhood of extraposed material	258
5.2.10.	Optionality	260
5.2.11.	Binding at the base	261
5.2.12.	Split antecedent.....	263
5.2.13.	Question formation.....	266
5.3.	Summary and conclusion	266
6.	Asyndetic specifying coordination and ellipsis	268
6.1.	Advantages of ellipsis in specifying coordination	268
6.2.	Coordination as hindrance	270
6.3.	Rules on ellipsis	276
7.	Extrapolation in general	278
8.	Conclusion	283
Appendix: example sentences		285

Chapter 8 Possession.....	305
1. Introduction.....	305
2. Prefatory overview: thematic roles and cognitive schemata	306
3. Attributive possessives in Dutch, German and English	310
3.1. Various possessive configurations.....	311
3.2. Case in possessive constructions	312
3.3. Empty prepositions.....	314
3.4. Prenominal possession	314
3.5. A brief evaluation of potential alternatives	319
3.6. Summary and conclusion	319
4. Possessive relatives.....	321
4.1. Outline of the data	321
4.2. Analysis	323
5. (Heavy) pied piping in relative clauses	328
5.1. Pied piping and preposition stranding.....	328
5.2. Heavy pied piping	330
6. Conclusion	335
Appendix: special constructions	337
A1. The Saxon genitive.....	337
A2. Multiple objects and the English double genitive	340
A3. Independent possessives in Dutch	344
A4. Qualitatives	345
Conclusion.....	351
Samenvatting in het Nederlands (summary in Dutch).....	353
Appendices.....	363
I Abbreviations	363
II Typological data.....	365
III Compendium of syntactic analyses of relative clauses	413
A. Restrictive and appositive adnominal relatives.....	413
B. Circumnominal relatives	421
C. Correlative constructions	424
IV Relative terminology	427
